Resource Person: Dr. Tien Anh Tran, Faculty at Seoul National University, Seoul City, South Korea

The online workshop titled "The Path to Publication: Best Practices in Scientific Research," led by Dr. Tien Anh Tran, a distinguished faculty member at Seoul National University, Seoul City, South Korea, was an enlightening and comprehensive session aimed at equipping researchers with the necessary tools and knowledge to successfully navigate the scientific publication process. The workshop attracted participants from various academic backgrounds, reflecting a diverse and engaged audience eager to enhance their publication skills. Dr. Tran began by emphasizing the importance of selecting the right journal for publication. He discussed criteria such as the journal's impact factor, scope, audience, and relevance to the research topic. Practical tips on matching research with a suitable journal were provided to increase the chances of acceptance, making the initial steps toward publication clearer and more manageable.

Following this, Dr. Tran shared detailed guidelines on structuring a manuscript. He focused on key components such as the abstract, introduction, methodology, results, and discussion sections. Highlighting common pitfalls, he provided actionable advice on writing clearly and concisely while adhering to journal-specific guidelines. This segment was particularly beneficial for participants, offering them a roadmap for organizing their research in a manner that meets academic standards and enhances readability.

Ethical considerations were thoroughly discussed, with Dr. Tran underscoring the importance of maintaining research integrity. Topics covered included authorship criteria, plagiarism, data management, and the ethical handling of research subjects. Dr. Tran stressed the necessity of transparency and honesty in all aspects of research and publication.
